

STANDARD FUTURE TECHNOLOGY DISCLAIMER

The future is always uncertain. The website design you are requesting includes features and functionality which is not generally accepted as "mainstream" technology.

While there are rarely guarantees about future technology, it is generally accepted that future technologies will provide backward compatibility, or at least gracefully deprecate any type of mainstream technology. For example a future web browser that does not support HTML will not be able to view the majority of the World Wide Web and therefore would be highly unlikely to gain any type of widespread support.

The design you have requested has components which have been identified by our staff as requiring functionality which is not mainstream. Subsequently the design and functionality may break in future generations of web-browsers which may not provide backward compatibility or downgrade gracefully – and all of these issues will be beyond the direct or even indirect control of Zoovy and it's partners.

In the event a future technology such as a security update, privacy control, or other software release breaks all or a portion of your website you agree to hold Zoovy, it's officers, employees and it's partners harmless.

In the event a future technology breaks your website:

- You may lose your entire investment and need to purchase a new design, or switch to one of the included Zoovy website designs.
- No immediate fix may be available, in fact no compensating fix may ever be available.
- If a compensating fix is available Zoovy may not have resources to handle all of the updates in a timely fashion.
- You may be asked to pay a rush fee or wait in the event a compensating fix is even available.
- You may be charged to apply the compensating fix (with your consent).

Zoovy does not, and cannot guarantee the functionality or operation of any AJAX web/2.0 design beyond the first 30 days.

Future technologies may not operate with certain web browsers, or disability software such as screen readers for blind people.

Future technologies may cause adverse search engine rankings or create situations or search engines are unable to understand your site.

While future technologies can increase sales, we take every effort to make customers aware of the potential risk to their business by utilizing these technologies.
